The Best Thing Ever

MELISSA FAGAN LAUREN NEL STEFANIA ORIGGI

Muzi loves to build things.
He dreams of building
the best thing ever.

Once he built a shelter
for his toys.

But it wasn't the best thing ever.

Yesterday he built a bridge
for his animals.

It was a good thing.
But not the best...

Today Muzi is going to visit Grandma.

He is sad. Without his toys, how can he build the best thing ever?

At the bus stop, Muzi is amazed.
He sees red things and blue things.
Small things and big things.
New things and old things.

Muzi has a new idea for building
the best thing ever.

On the road to Grandma's,
Muzi finds many things.
Long things and short things.
Round things and square things.

By the riverside, Muzi finds more things.
Soft things and pointy things.
Green things and brown things.

Look, Muzi! We are here.

While Grandma bakes for the hungry travellers...
Muzi builds.

“Grandma!” says Muzi.

“The world is full of toys.

Look what I can build.”

“Oh, Muzi,” laughs Grandma.
“A new house for me.
This is the best thing ever!”
